FIRST SIEGE

ISSUE #1

Islamabad, Pakistan — Emergency OIC Summit

PAKISTANI PM: “Thank you for coming on such short notice. We have an emergency in Telangana, India.”

“Indian authorities report that an unknown entity has overrun Hyderabad. Conventional forces have failed to contain it.

EGYPTIAN PM: “Are we certain this is a military threat?”

PAKISTANI PM: “No. That's precisely the problem. We don't know what we're dealing with.”

EGYPTIAN PM: “Then what exactly are you proposing? Sending troops into another country's territory without an invitation?”

BANGLADESHI PM: “That would create an international crisis”

PAKISTANI PM: "But we have received a direct request for assistance from the Indian government."

INDIAN PM: "I am speaking to the OIC because my government has run out of options."

INDIAN PM: "Hyderabad has fallen. Thousands of civilians are trapped, and our forces cannot stop the entity attacking them."

SAUDI KING: "If your military cannot contain it, what makes you believe anyone else can?"

INDIAN PM: "Because what is attacking us isn't behaving like an army."

INDIAN PM: "We need people who can fight something our soldiers cannot. And we have intelligence reports that Pakistan has a secret Super Humans Project"

NIGERIAN PRESIDENT: "So we're being asked to intervene in a conflict that isn't ours?"

INDIAN PM: "No. You're being asked to save civilians who cannot save themselves."

PAKISTANI PM: "Muslims and Hindus are dying together. Whatever differences our governments may have, this threat recognizes none of them."

NIGERIAN PRESIDENT: "Then borders are irrelevant to the people trapped inside them."

PAKISTANI PM: "Exactly We will have to do something."

PAKISTANI PM: "Then we will not send an army."
"We will send something else."

PAKISTANI PM: "Six heroes. Six nations. One purpose. A team of with Super Human Abilities . A team formed for one purpose Saving the innocents"
" The Legion of Muslims."

Sherdil from Pakistan. With superhuman strength and armed with an indestructible metal sword and shield, he is the leader of this team

Shah

Shah from Iran, who possessed elemental control. He believed in balance above all else—fire and water, destruction and creation. Today, he would use both to protect.

Buraq

Buraq from Turkey. With his mighty wings, he could fly faster than any jet. Stronger than an ordinary man and have High Tech weapons

Shaheen

Shaheen from Qatar, equipped with enhanced senses and reflexes. He saw the world in data—weak points, trajectories, probabilities. He never spoke much, but he never missed a detail.

Archer

Archer From Egypt—the world's number one marksman. Armed with a quiver of mystical and weaponized arrows, he had never missed a shot in his life.

Ghazi

The last and most powerful was Ghazi. He was incredibly strong, could teleport, and fire lasers from his eyes. He could also absorb energy from the sun. But his power had a price—the more he absorbed, the more it burned him from within. He was willing to pay that price.

Six heroes. Six nations united by one purpose: to save the innocent.

EGYPTIAN PM: “And you're certain these six can handle this?”

PAKISTANI PM: “No. These six are the only force we have that was built for something like this.”

INDIAN PM: “If you send them, India will give them full access to Hyderabad.”

PAKISTANI PM: "Then we have an agreement."

SAUDI KING: "May they reach the innocent before the monster does."

PAKISTANI PM: "They will."

Hyderabad — Meanwhile...

DEV: "Your weapons cannot stop me. You keep sending soldiers."

"I keep Destroying them."

"Bring me something worthy."

Here, both Muslims and Hindus were being ruthlessly killed. Chaos reigned everywhere. In the streets, neighbors who once stood divided now ran together—their only common enemy was death itself.

The Indian army was finished. They were exhausted and outnumbered. But even in defeat, they fought side by side.

Hyderabad, Telangana

A monstrous, nuclear weapon was about to destroy the entire state. The Indian government had activated it as a last resort—but it would kill everyone. The Indian government had given them 24 hours. The Legion of Muslims had just one day to kill the Dev and save the people of Telangana. Twenty-two hours remained.

Legion Headquarters, Islamabad

Their mission was clear. They had to reach Hyderabad and destroy the Dev before time ran out. If they failed, millions would die—and their nations would forever be remembered for standing by.

They boarded their jet and set course for India. Hyderabad was their destination. As they rose into the sky, Sherdil whispered a prayer for those they were about to save.

The jet was supposed to land directly in Hyderabad. But the Dev's corruption had spread further than anyone expected. as soon as they entered Telangana's airspace, a shell struck them. The Dev had anticipated their arrival.

The jet was struck by a powerful missile. They were going down. In the chaos, no one panicked—they had trained for this. The jet crashed in the heart of enemy territory.

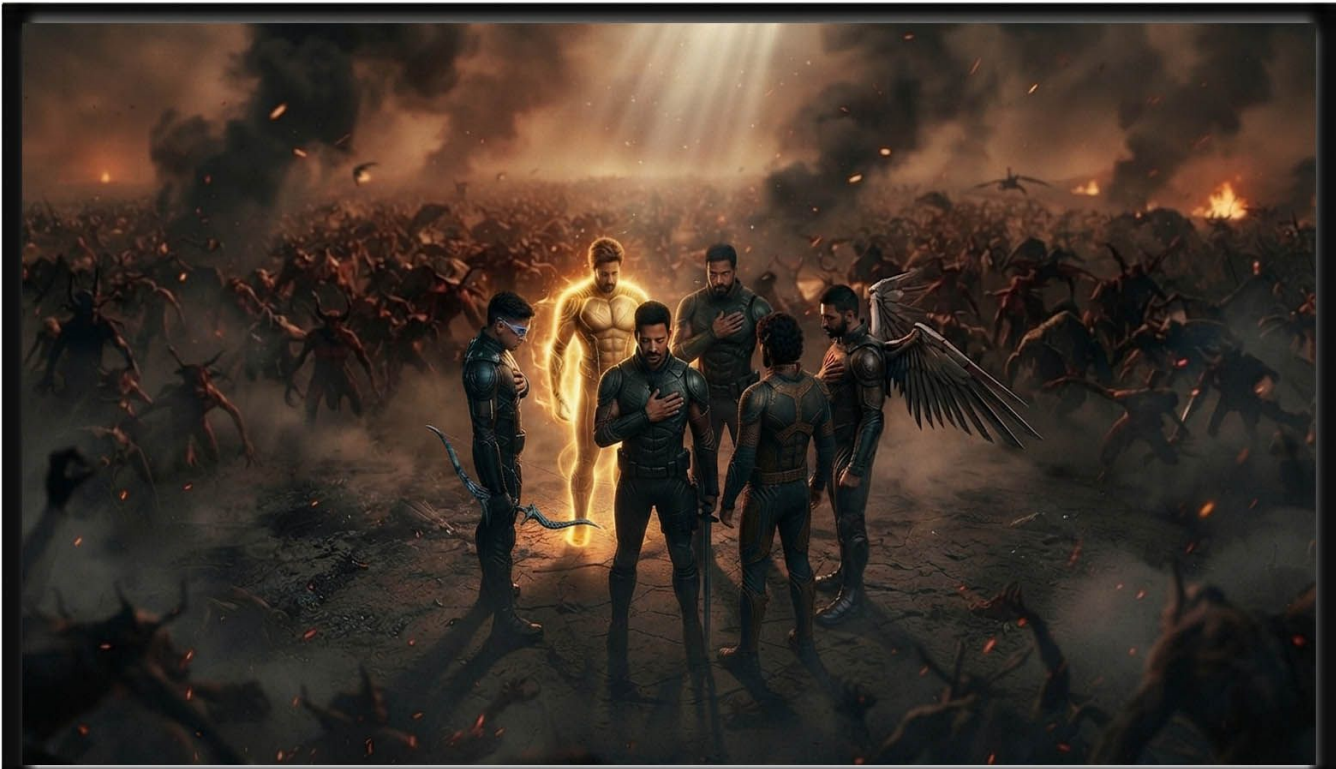

Sherdil (Dialogue): "Ghazi ! You must go. Destroy the Dev. Only then can we save them! We will hold these demons here. Go—and do not look back."

Ghazi (Dialogue): "And if I don't return ,tell my family that I loved them"

Sherdil (Dialogue): "Whatever happens today, we fight not for nations. Not for flags. We fight for the innocent. For the children. For those who cannot fight for themselves."

In that moment, they were not Pakistani, Iranian, Turkish, Qatari, or anything else. They were simply servants of the Most Merciful, sent to show mercy.

Sherdil (Dialogue): "For the people! FOR ALLAH!"

All (Dialogue): "ALLAHU AKBAR!"

Sherdil (Dialogue): "Go. We will hold them off. Bring us victory, Ghazi. Bring us hope"

Ghazi advanced toward the Dev, cutting through any demon that stood in his path. He would not be stopped. He could not be stopped.
The other Legion members engage the demon army

Sherdil (Dialogue): "Form a defensive line! Don't let them break through!
Protect each other's backs!"

Shah (Dialogue): "I can hold them for now! Watch the sides—don't let them surround us! They're trying to flank!"

Buraq swoops down from above, grabbing a demon and throwing it into a group of others to disrupt their formation. He dodges a claw strike by inches.

Buraq (Dialogue): "They're regrouping on the left! Be careful—they're smarter than they look! This isn't mindless rage!"

Shaheen (Dialogue): "Their joints are weak—aim for the knees and shoulders! I'm reading structural weaknesses in their necks!"

Archer, positioned on higher ground, fires arrows with deadly accuracy, taking down demons that are about to attack his teammates from the side.

Archer (Dialogue): "Two on your right, Sherdil. I've got them. One... two... down. Don't worry—I never miss."

Ghazi reached the Dev. The battle had begun. The Dev was incredibly powerful—more powerful than anything Ghazi had ever faced.

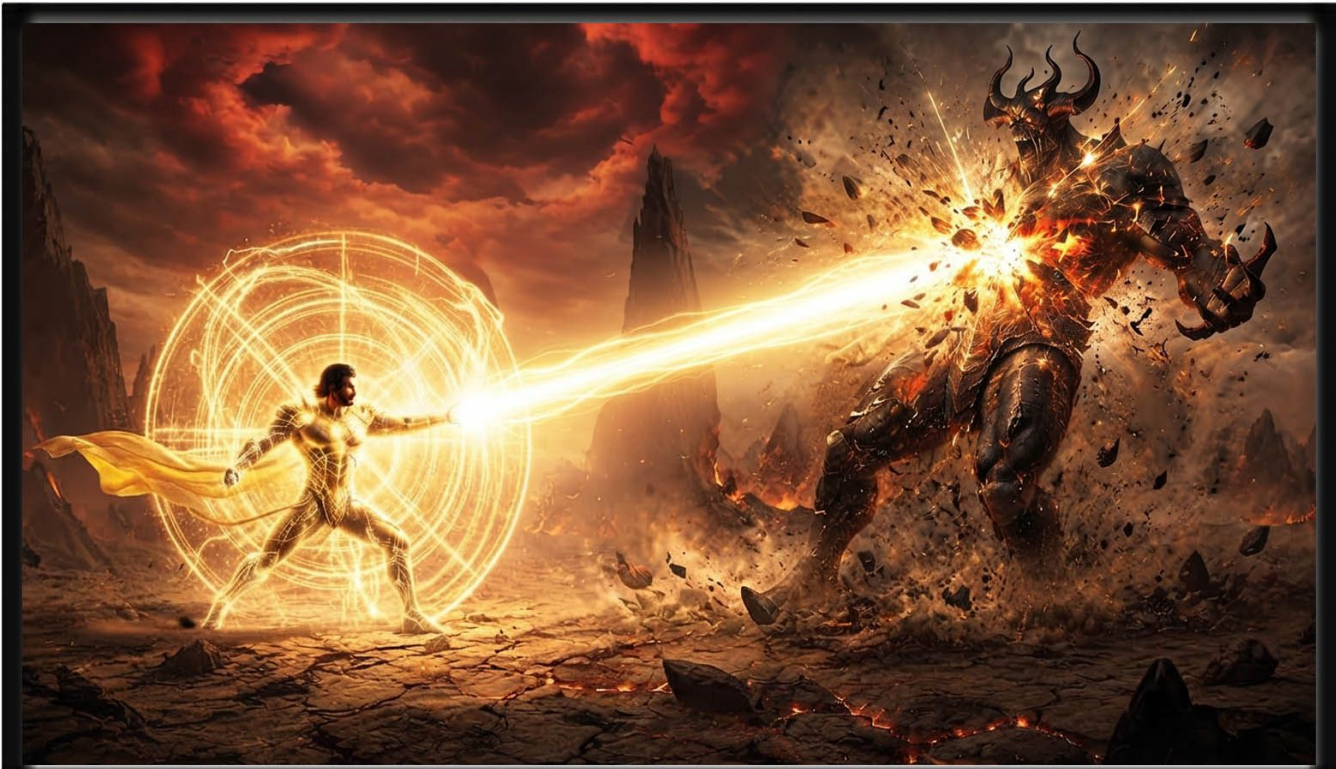

Ghazi engaged the mighty Dev, but time was running out. The Dev was too powerful. Meanwhile, the nuclear weapon was about to detonate. Because Demons were escaping the State of Telangana ,So Indian Government skiped 20 Hours of timer to stop invasion of demons into other states

In his moment of need, Ghazi looked to the sun. He began absorbing its energy, drawing immense power from the celestial star. He knew the price—he might not survive. But the people were worth it.

Ghazi (Dialogue): "Ya Allah... give me strength. Let my sacrifice mean something. Let them live."

Ghazi (Dialogue): "For the innocent! For the children! For everyone who cannot fight! I WILL END THIS!"

Dev (Dialogue - screaming): "N00000!"

Ghazi channeled the sun's energy and destroyed the Dev. But the nuclear weapon was still active and about to detonate. Thirty seconds remained.

Seeing the nuclear threat, Shah stepped forward. He knew the radiation would burn him from the inside. He did not hesitate. He began absorbing all the deadly radiation into himself.

Shah (Dialogue -): "NONE... OF THIS... WILL REACH THE PEOPLE! I WON'T... LET IT!"

Shah, now filled with the nuclear energy, channels it upward. His body is wracked with pain—the radiation eating away at him. But he doesn't stop. He launches the absorbed radiation out of the Earth's atmosphere .

The radiation was neutralized. The people below were safe. Shah had saved them from certain death. But the cost was high—his body was ravaged by the energy he had absorbed.

With the Dev's death and the nuclear threat neutralized, all the people were healed. The curse was broken. They were finally free. Hindu and Muslim alike—they were all just grateful to be alive .

But Ghazi... Ghazi had given his life to save them. He stood alone in the crater where the Dev had been.

And suddenly smoke rose from the ground. The others ran towards crater .

When the people saw him, they realized it was Ghazi. He had survived the blast but he had given everything he had. He was injured. He had sacrificed his strength to save them all. And he would do it again.

Sherdil raises his sword and shouts "Nara-e-Takbeer". The entire crowd joins in celebration. Crowd shouts energetically "Allahu Akbar! Allahu Akbar!"

Hindu Father (Dialogue): "You... you saved us. You were not Indian. You were not Hindu. You were... you were just a good man. Thank you."

Ghazi (Dialogue) : " Please stand up I did not see your religion. I saw... I saw people who needed help. Every life is important for me"

Shaheen : I still don't understand where they (Dev and Demons) came from?

Sherdil : We will find out Who is behind this .

They came as strangers. They would leave as brothers. The Legion of Muslims had done what no army could. They had saved the innocent. And in doing so, they had shown that unity was possible.

Six heroes. Six nations. One purpose. They never asked for gratitude. They never sought glory. They just wanted to save lives.

"And whoever saves a life, it is as if he has saved all of humanity."
